PRETTY TEA COZIES.
 Useful and Ornamental Adjuncts to the Cup That Cheers.
 Every housekeeper wants at least one cozy, and if she be a lady of leisure and artistic tastes with means to gratify her inclinations she will have one to match each tea service. According to Modern Frisilla, for her gold and white china she will fashion a cozy of creamy silk embroidered with Japanese gold thread, and if the china have any special decoration she will copy the same design on the cozy. For a dainty set of Sevres or Limoges she will make a cozy of exquisite brocade, here also as far as possible matching the design. For the simple blue and white ware of American or Chinese manufacture, there will be one in blue and white china silk or crepe and for the Japanese set one of Japanese silk, with bands of velvet of a harmonizing color across the bottom.

As for the form of the cozy, the simplest is the most popular and might be briefly described as being exactly like the larger half of an egg in shape. Conical cozies composed of from four to eight sections are more troublesome to make, and, except in the case of a tassel of unusual size and shape, not so pretty.
 Creamy white satin sheeting worked with a Dresden pattern of small flowers, edged with a band of gold colored velvet and finished with a gold cord makes about as splendid a cozy as can be desired. Old blue India silk, painted with a cloudy gold band of gold about the bottom and seams, or finished at the bottom with a velvet band and lined with silk if any neutral tint, is extremely pretty and serviceable as well. Silkoline makes a pretty cover for the outside — can be taken off and washed. If one of these is made with a puff of silk over the top, matching in shade the flower in the silkoline and laced across with baby ribbon, it is charming indeed.
 One of the most serviceable of cozies is made from chambray of a soft, medium brown tone. It is embroidered with daisies and across the lower edge is a band of unattractive gold braid sewed on with fancy stitches in brown silk. It is lined with silk of the same color as the skin, and the cord is also of brown.

A Word of Caution.
 The New York Tribune says: Now that black moires have become fashionable it is well to recall the fact that these goods are not equal to satin or faille fabrics in durability. The process of watering them, which necessitates the use of heat, tends to weaken the silk unless the fabric is of a pure, unguessed quality. A good quality of moire will probably wear almost as well as satin, but inferior qualities of watered silks are to be shunned, whether in broche antique or the softer moire francais. In spite of the present popularity of black, it will find a powerful rival in the new carnation browns, which are a dull, neutral color, more becoming to the complexion than black and equally suitable as a foil for brighter colors.

PITTSTON.
 Commissioners W. H. Sturdevant, E. H. Chase and Ira D. Shaver, who were appointed some time ago by the court to pass upon the question of creating a new township out of portions of Kingston, Exeter and Franklin townships, filed their report with the clerk of the court Saturday. Their report is adverse to the proposed division. It was intended to begin the new township at a point in the rear of Luzerne Borough, the eastern line extending in a northwesterly direction about four miles to the Exeter township line, thence along the southern line of the latter almost to the Franklin line.
 The town council will meet in regular session in the Town hall this evening and the indications are that a lively meeting it will be. As is well known, considerable friction exists among the firemen and certain members of the council over the action of the former in refusing to let the latter have any voice in the election of a chief for the fire department. The ordinance which governed the borough for the last twenty years and which has been declared void by the court, provides that the election of a chief to be legal must be confirmed by the council. The election of J. H. Mullen by the delegates in convention assembled and the refusal of the chairman of the fire committee to present his name to the council for confirmation, alleging as his reason that the election was not carried out in compliance with the ordinance caused Mr. Mullen to resign, thereby precipitating the fight. It was doubly sealed at the convention last week when the firemen elected Gary Llewellyn and passed a resolution totally ignoring the borough council. Should the council insist on having a voice in the election, there is no telling where the trouble will end. If they felt so disposed in order to force recognition from the firemen they could prevent the use of the plugs, thereby practically shutting off the water supply. In such an event it is quite likely the citizens would take a hand in the matter, and then what? Evidently either one or the other will yet take water.

CRITICISING A YOUNG LADY.
 "She would be a pretty girl for but one thing."
 "What's that?" asked Charley.
 "George—her face is always covered with purple and red blotches."
 Charley's cheeks easily enough disposed of. Used to be the same way myself, but I caught on to the trouble one day, and got rid of it in no time.
 "What was it?"
 "Charley—Simply local eruptions. Took a short course of P. P. P. I tell you, it's the best blood corrector. The governor had rheumatism so bad that you could hear him roller clear across the country every time he moved. He tried it, and you know what an athletic old cent he is now. If somebody would give Miss Daisy a short course of P. P. P. I think them afterwards. All the drug stores sell it."

 Mr. Lambert will see company at his house, No. 21, St. James' church, from 11 to 9 o'clock. Tickets of admission, one shilling each.
 Mr. Lambert had been keeper of the old county Bridewell at Leicester, and, despite his physical immensity, was a very intelligent and active person. A Kentish innkeeper named Lamb, who weighed only 350 pounds, visited Mr. Lambert, and appears to have been deeply mortified at his own inferiority, for on returning home he was suddenly taken ill and died. Mr. Lambert weighed 730 pounds just before his death.—New York Times.

FOR THE WATER NYMPHS.

Bathing Costumes That Are Things of Beauty and Joy for a Season.
 The time of year has arrived when every little piece of water big enough to get into assumes an inviting glassiness of surface and warm limpidity of depth that tempt one to plunge in regardless of consequences unless one of the exceptional class who do not open air bathing. To those who are sufficiently warm blood-

A BATHING COSTUME.
 or sufficiently active swimmers to feel no physical discomfort from immersion in cold water there is no amusement quite so exhilarating. All children delight in dabbling in water, and perhaps this is a survival of childish tastes. At any rate, it is a very innocent pleasure and a very leveling one. We all look alike in the water, as far as distinctions of beauty and society go, provided we are all real water lovers and do not merely pretend to bathe. The wet hair of the mistress and of the maid looks equally like seaweed, and the nose of the patrician and of the proletarian burns regardless of class distinctions. Many persons who cannot bathe in fresh water can go into salt water with impunity because of its vigorous and stimulating quality. A pretty bathing suit keeps its beauty in fresh water far longer than when it is worn into the ocean, but that is the only point in which the advantage does not rest with salt water. One does not swim quite so rapidly in the latter, but one keeps up longer and with less fatigue on account of its buoyant quality. An illustration is given of a white flannel bathing costume. The bodice, which is made with a yoke, is gathered into a belt, to which are sewed the short trousers. The skirt is gathered into a belt having buttonholes corresponding to buttons on the belt of the bodice and trousers. The sleeves are short and are held to the arm by elastic to prevent chafing, which is sure to happen if a swimmer's sleeves are left loose. The wide sailor collar is of navy blue flannel, as are the band around the skirt and the belt.

JUDIC CHOLLET.
 Influence of Religion in Mexico.
 The mingling of the offices of religion with the affairs of everyday life emphasizes the sixteenth century feeling which in Mexico is so pointedly suggested by the strong houses and the barred doors. It is a feeling that gives to the country a potent and peculiar charm, under the spell of which come gladly those who seek refuge there from the later civilization that is glared upon by electricity and that is driven by steam. And the charm works most powerfully upon the fortunate few who dwell in this region of rest long enough really to understand the whole of its excellent meaning, and to know how true and how central is Mexican hospitality when once the barred doors are opened wide. They do not open easily, these doors, but having been opened, they never are closed again against a friend.—Harper's Weekly.

Absence of Mind.
 Some people find it hard, in using the telephone, to realize that they are not face to face with the person they are addressing. A prominent merchant in the capital city of a state sat at his desk one hot day in July. In order to secure some degree of comfort he had taken off his coat and his collar and necktie.
 A clerk came into the room.
 "His excellency the governor wishes to speak with you through the telephone," said the clerk.
 "The governor? Dear me!" said the merchant.
 He rose, hastily put on his collar, his necktie and his coat, gave his hair a stroke, and went to the telephone to answer the governor's call.—Youth's Companion.
